“For over 45 years the Auditorium has been the Chicago home for Alvin Ailey American Dance Theater, and we are once again thrilled to have them back on our stage to celebrate with us during our milestone 125th Anniversary Season,” said Auditorium Theatre Executive Director Brett Batterson. “The Presidential Medal of Freedom that was recently awarded to Alvin Ailey could not have been more deserved and speaks to the long lasting legacy that Mr. Ailey, Judith Jamison and now Robert Battle continue to carry on from generation to generation.”

Artistic Director Robert Battle who “[takes] the troupe in new directions while maintaining its beloved traditions,” (Chicago Tribune) continues to enhance the already rich repertory of Alvin Ailey American Dance Theater by combining a vibrant array of new choreographic voices with classical and traditional pieces. Not only does Battle bring in choreographers from around the world to work with the company, he also looks inside the Ailey family as seen with the recent premiere of “ODETTA” by Ailey dancer and Rehearsal Director Matthew Rushing. The diverse Chicago programming also features exciting new work including the company premieres of Christopher Wheeldon’s “After the Rain (Pas de Deux),” Hofesh Shechter’s “Uprising,” Ulysses Dove’s “Bad Blood,” Asadata Dafora’s “Awassa Astrige/Ostrich” and Hans van Manen’s “Polish Pieces.”

Other pieces include Ronald K. Brown’s “Grace,” Ulysses Dove’s “Episodes” as well as Ailey’s personal masterpiece, “Revelations.”

“After celebrating 25 years since the passing of Alvin Ailey and accepting the Presidential Medal of Honor on his behalf, it is only fitting that we return to our second home, Chicago, to celebrate with them during their 125th Anniversary,” said Alvin Ailey American Dance Theater Artistic Director Robert Battle.
Director Robert Battle. “Just as Mr. Ailey told a story through dance, the Auditorium tells a story through the incredible history of talent that has graced its stage. We are always thrilled to present both new work and some of our favorites to the Chicago audiences and we look forward to the next 125 years of performing at the Auditorium.”

ODETTA

Odetta Holmes—one of the most influential singers of the 20th century—is rediscovered as renowned Aliley dancer and Rehearsal Director Matthew Rushing marries soul-stirring movement to songs by the artist anointed “the queen of American folk music” by Martin Luther King, Jr. in “ODETTA.” Rushing’s world premiere for Ailey pays tribute to Holmes’ life as a singer, songwriter, actress, activist and “the voice of the Civil Rights Movement” which the Associated Press proclaims “…the timing could hardly be more apt for Alvin Ailey American Dance Theater’s new civil rights-themed piece.” With a musical repertoire encompassing American folk music, blues, jazz, and spirituals, Odetta influenced many key figures of the 1960s folk-revival scene including Bob Dylan, Joan Baez, Mavis Staples and Janis Joplin. With projections by artist Stephen Alcorn, “ODETTA” marks Rushing’s third ballet created for Alvin Ailey American Dance Theater. The cast of 12 perform to spoken word and songs by Odetta, including “This Little Light of Mine,” “Sometimes I Feel Like a Motherless Child,” “Cool Water” and “Glory, Glory.” It also includes an original recording of the “Freedom Trilogy” Odetta famously performed at the 1963 March on Washington that was recreated for the ballet by Ysaye M. Barnwell. “ODETTA” was created with the support of commissioning funds from New York City Center.

After the Rain (Pas de Deux)

Christopher Wheeldon’s “After the Rain” premiered in 2005 at New York City Ballet’s annual New Combinations Evening in which Dance Magazine stated, “rare is the ballet that resonates so profoundly with audiences that it becomes an instant hit.” A ballet in two parts, the company will perform the work’s second section, a male-female pas de deux that has become a standalone piece. Praised for its sublime simplicity and intricate partnering, it will be revealed in a fresh light as the Aliley dancers make it their own. Set to music by the Estonian composer Arvo Pärt, the sensual duet has resonated deeply with audiences and will be the first work by Christopher Wheeldon to enter the Aliley repertory.

Uprising

Hofesh Shechter, “one of the most inventive new choreographic voices to turn up in quite a while,” (The New York Times) created his critically-acclaimed piece “Uprising” in 2006. The first piece of Shechter’s to enter into the Aliley repertory features seven men who emerge from the shadows to bombard the stage with furious intensity, bonding and sparring in a highly charged work set to a percussive score by the choreographer himself. Widely considered his breakthrough work, “Uprising” defined Shechter as a new rebellious voice in dance with an untouchable ability to captivate audiences and set hearts pounding. Utilizing a movement style that is primal and imbued with a certain high-tension energy, the Israeli-born Shechter has risen to become one of Europe’s most sought-after dance creators since his move to London in 2002.

Bad Blood

In “Bad Blood,” choreographed by Ulysses Dove in 1986, passionate emotions and kinetic, athletic energy encapsulate the powerful yet extremely tender war between the sexes, asking the question “can we be a duo and an individual at the same time?” In a desperate and futile search for connection through physical impact, the seven dancers leapfrog over one another, hurl and fling themselves at each other, ending up in fierce and violent embraces. With music by Laurie Anderson and Peter Gabriel, “Bad Blood” was the precursor to two other Dove ballets on the same theme, “Episodes” (which can be seen in different Ailey programs during their Chicago visit) and “Urban Folk Dance,” and was the fourth of what would eventually be seven Dove ballets performed by Ailey dancers. Ulysses Dove has been hailed as one of the most exciting choreographers to emerge in the latter half of the twentieth century, renowned for a style that merged the influences of his choreographic mentors, Alvin Ailey and Merce Cunningham.

Awassa Astrige/Ostrich

Set to Carl Riley’s score of African drumming and flute, Sierra Leone-born choreographer Asadata Dafora’s “Awassa Astrige/Ostrich” was one of the first modern dance compositions to fuse African movements with Western staging. This groundbreaking 1932 solo—showcasing a man with arms flapping like wings, torso rippling and head held high, depicts a warrior transforming into the proud, powerful ostrich — the king of birds.

Polish Pieces

In “Polish Pieces,” Dutch choreographer Hans van Manen displays his mastery for building dazzling creations from simple motifs and geometric patterns. Driven by the rhythms of Henryk Górecki’s score, the 12 dancers in this colorful ensemble work create a brilliant kaleidoscope of energy in pulsating group sections that the New York Times says is “a beautifully rehearsed ensemble, bobbing dynamically through changing angular shapes.”

Grace

Ronald K. Brown’s landmark “Grace,” created for Alvin Ailey American Dance Theater in 1999, returns in a rapturous, spiritually-charged new production. Infused with Brown’s signature blend of modern dance and West African idioms, this moving journey acknowledging the grace that surrounds us all is set to Duke Ellington's classic "Come Sunday," Roy Davis’ hit "Gabriel," and the powerful rhythms of Fela Kuti’s Afro-Pop. Brown has created and presented dances since 1985 with his company Evidence and honors include the Bessie Award, a Guggenheim Fellowship, the American Dance Festival Humphrey/Weidman/Limon Award, among others. Most recently he received accolades for his Astaire award-winning choreography for the Broadway revival of The Gershwin’s “Porgy and Bess.” Says Battle, “Brown’s choreography uses African dance in a unique and potent way. ‘Grace’ is a brilliant work, and an important part of the Ailey repertory. From the beautiful opening solo…there are elements that represent both the religious and secular. The strong tension between these two opposites, and how they sometimes reflect one another, remains gripping right to the very end.”
Episodes

Former Alvin Ailey dancer turned choreographer Ulysses Dove first created his explosive choreographic masterpiece, "Episodes," for the classical London Festival Ballet in 1987 where the piece was danced in bare feet. The following year, Dove re-choreographed the dance en pointe for Patrick Dupond’s Ballet Francais de Nancy and in 1989, Alvin Ailey took “Episodes” into the repertory of Alvin Ailey American Dance Theater, allowing audiences a glimpse of what dance would look like in the next century. Like his mentor Ailey, who was always exploring the battle of the sexes in his choreography, Dove sharply exposed the eternal dilemma of men and women—can we live with each other or can we live without each other? —to a provocative score by Robert Ruggieri.

Revelations

Rounding out the program is one of Alvin Ailey’s personal masterpieces that has become a signature American classic. "Revelations," (1960) a suite of dances that fervently explores the places of deepest grief and holiest joy in the soul, will be performed at each performance throughout the two weekend engagement.

Founded by Alvin Ailey, recent posthumous recipient of the Presidential Medal of Freedom – the nation’s highest civilian honor, and guided by Judith Jamison beginning in 1989, the Company is now led by Robert Battle, whom Judith Jamison chose to succeed her on July 1, 2011. Alvin Ailey American Dance Theater has performed for an estimated 23 million people in 71 countries on 6 continents, promoting the uniqueness of the African-American cultural experience and the preservation and enrichment of the American modern dance tradition.
