THE AUDITORIUM THEATRE OF ROOSEVELT UNIVERSITY KICKS-OFF “MADE IN CHICAGO” PERFORMANCE SERIES, SHOWCASING THE CITY’S BEST IN MUSIC AND DANCE

November Welcomes The First Three “Made in Chicago” Performances Including singer-songwriter Susan Werner, Orbert Davis’ Chicago Jazz Philharmonic and dance ensemble Thodos Dance Chicago

CHICAGO, IL — Celebrating a milestone 125th Anniversary, the Auditorium Theatre of Roosevelt University kicks off its inaugural “Made in Chicago” performance series highlighting the city’s best homegrown music and dance artists and ensembles. Launching in November, the robust series will present three Windy City mainstays including “On Stage With… Susan Werner” (November 8); the perennially popular Orbert Davis’ Chicago Jazz Philharmonic with “CJP @ Ten” (November 14); and the award-winning Thodos Dance Chicago (November 29).

“Chicago boasts one of the most prosperous, innovative, and highly influential arts scenes in the world,” said Auditorium Theatre Executive Director Brett Batterson. “When we conceived of the ‘Made in Chicago’ performance series, it was our intention to celebrate the local artists that continue to shape our city’s rich cultural foundation and reputation. These three performances represent a diverse range of talent and tradition, and we look forward to presenting them during such a historic season at the Auditorium.”

“On Stage With…Susan Werner”
Saturday, November 8, 2014 | 7:30 p.m. | $50 ($75 sold out)

Susan Werner, an Auditorium Theatre favorite and “one of the most innovative songwriters working today” (“Chicago Tribune”), returns for an intimate “On Stage With…” performance, allowing audiences to experience the show while sitting on the theatre’s landmark stage. The quick-witted songstress brings her unique brand of rural folk tunes and charming melodies to the Auditorium on the heels of the successful 2014 musical debut of “Bull Durham,” an adaptation of the popular 1988 film featuring Kevin Costner and Susan Sarandon, for which Werner served as composer and lyricist. Werner’s latest album, 2013’s “Hayseed,” draws upon characters from Werner’s farm heritage in Iowa, and explores issues in food and agriculture today with affection and humor. With Adam Chaffins, bass, and Johnny Rodgers, piano.

Support for Susan Werner provided by Mel and Renee Katten.

Celebrating its 10th Anniversary in 2014, Orbert Davis’ Chicago Jazz Philharmonic (CJP) heads back to the Auditorium Theatre with “CJP @ Ten,” a montage of favorite moments from past performances. Wilsyn, Ari Brown, Mwata Bowden, and Howard Levy, will perform Davis’ acclaimed arrangements and compositions showcasing CJP’s signature style of classical music and jazz. Works on the program include selections from “Collective Creativity,” an eight-movement suite tracing the African Diaspora to the Americas; “Do you Know What it Means to Miss New Orleans,” featuring the Grammy Award-winning Levy on harmonica; selections from the Great American Songbook honoring Ella Fitzgerald, Billie Holiday, and Sarah Vaughn; and a final piece to be unveiled during the performance, as determined by CJP’s online fan poll.
